A Regency mahogany lamp table with frieze drawer and leather inset top.

This piece is characteristic of the end of the Regency period, with a masculine appearance including a tapered central support column and deeply carved lions paw feet.

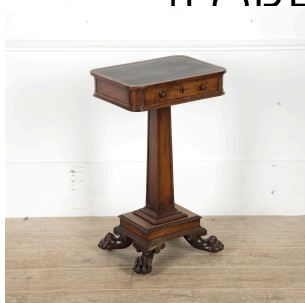

With original patina and colour, this lamp table is of a very high quality with wonderful attention to detail.

The Regency period saw the production of lots of tables for more specific purposes and it was a high point of sophisticated furniture.

Mahogany was very much the wood of choice, giving Regency furniture a rich patina and heavy authority.
