Edwardian wicker laundry basket on four wheels.

'Clothes hampers', as they were often known, emerged as a way to keep laundry out of sight in the home.

They were multi-functional, with the option of storing things or moving them around the home. This basket is particularly practical in the fact it is on wheels.

Laundry baskets such as this one were becoming particularly popular during Edwardian Britain, on offer in multiple sizes from places like Sears Roebuck & Co.

This basket is perfect for a rustic decorative scheme and useful for storing textiles.
