Mid 20th Century composition sundial, with a late 18th Century bronze dial.

This sundial has a typical baluster-form carved pedestal with a circular top. With an earlier bronze horizontal dial which is beautifully patinated, with an upright gnomon. Still legible Roman numerals to the dial.

Sundials were one of the earliest methods for man to tell time. They are very decorative and a lovely piece of history, making for particularly effective centrepieces in the garden.

This example has attractive weathering and patination throughout.
